“ I am so sorry to lose one of my lifetime friends. Dale called me on a Thursday night back in high school and asked me if I wanted to go bass fishing the coming Saturday, he told me I had never fished in a pond like the one me , him , his dad , and the owner of the pond. Of course I said yes but I figured it would be just an average , long fruitless bass fishing day like all of the bass fishing days always were to me . That was before Dale Collins truthfully “ taught “ me really how to fish for bass, forget the “ Lucky 13 “ lure , he taught me how to use the correct colors of worms and each water level, surface greenery thickness, dark or light water, wind speed , etc , by the mid afternoon I had caught more bass in five hours than I had in my entire life ! It was a place in Macon , MS close to the Alabama line. For the rest of our lives , every time we ran into one another, we always talked about our plans to “ one day “ get together again and go back over there and do some more damage on the bass population. We always think that we will have plenty of time in our lives to do things together, forgetting that tomorrow is not promised . I will regret not getting together again , even if just to grab a bite to eat . Dale was one of the “ Good “ guys ! Praying for Tracy and the family ! God Bless all of You ! ~ Chris Land

That's a sweet memory, Chris. He took me fishing there many times and he always said I could catch more than him. Probably because he baited my hook and took the fish off for me every time. He will be missed so very much.
